SANMINA-SCI GUADALAJARA RECEIVES NATIONAL LABOR AWARD

Prestigious Labor Award Presented by Secretary of Labor of Mexico, Javier Lozano Alarcon on Behalf of the President of Mexico, Felipe Calderón Hinojosa

SAN JOSE, Calif. – October 24, 2007 – Sanmina-SCI Corporation (Nasdaq NM: SANM), a leading global electronics manufacturing services (EMS) company, today announced that its Mexico operations has received the National Labor Award for its excellence in developing a work environment that fosters the highest levels of employee involvement and success in Mexico during 2006. The distinguished award was presented to Sanmina-SCI by the Secretary of Labor of Mexico, Javier Lozano Alarcon, on behalf of the President of Mexico, Felipe Calderón Hinojosa, during a presentation ceremony in Guadalajara.

The National Labor Award recognizes companies that are proactive and successful in developing and implementing employee programs that foster a cooperative work environment, in addition to training programs developed to stimulate innovation and career growth.

“This is another key milestone for Sanmina-SCI’s Mexico Operations and exemplifies our commitment to creating a work environment that encourages innovative thinking and collaboration among our employees,” said Marco González Hagelsieb, Sanmina-SCI’s Senior Vice President of Mexico Operations. “Everyone at Sanmina-SCI contributes to quality processes to increase customer satisfaction, reduce cost, maintain production output, and uphold manufacturing and delivery excellence each and every day. Sanmina-SCI Mexico is truly honored to receive this award and we look forward to achieving new levels of success in the future.”
